Fudge Family Farms

Fudge Family Farms is located in Madison. By breeding Duroc pigs with Berkshire pigs, Henry Fudge has created a line of hogs that have incredible marbling, tenderness and flavor. "We began in 1971 preserving the old type, naturally outdoor adapted Duroc breed of hog and haven't introduced any outside genetics since the late 1970s," Fudge explains. "These heritage bloodline Durocs are, to my knowledge, the only ones of their type in existence today."

In 2006 Fudge began to locate other small farmers in Alabama and Tennessee to help raise the Heritage Durocs blended with old type Berkshires. And he now has 20 co-producers, most of whom are Amish families. "We never use any antibiotics or added hormones, and feed only plant derived feed. All our animals live outdoors in the fresh air and sunshine with access to forage," Fudge says. The new mothers are provided an area large enough to turn around and make a nest, just like nature intended. "We believe that healthy, happy hogs make healthy meat," he says. Fudge pork can be found at V. Richards.
